OLD CAPE COD COTTAGE

In the old village of Dennis on Cape Cod is this cottage built in 1790. The classic lines of the Cape Cod cottage don't betray the age of this Early American home which is almost identical in appearance of the new homes of this style. The home is on the high, old part of the town near the cemetery.

NEW FIRE RATING IN MATTAPOISETT

New fire insurance classification for Mattapoisett will be reflected in lower rates for those who qualify. The classification has changed to 6th class for special rated property and Grade C. for dwelling minimum rates. Previously the rate was 7th class and Grade D.

This change is attributed to overall improvement in fire protection, particularly in reference to water supply, fire department and fire alarm system. John R. Anderson, superintendent of New England Insurance Rating Association, advised Selectmen of the new rating.

WHARF WORK AWARDED

Bids were opened in Boston on Tuesday for repairs to the Mattapoisett Wharf. Coast Construction Company was low bidder with $61,110.00. Campanelli & Cardi bid $73,835.00. The State had estimated $53,640. for the work. The Coast Construction Company was awarded the contract and work will begin after Labor Day.

CRANBERRY EMPLOYMENT OFFICE TO OPEN

The Cranberry Employment Office, a branch of the Massachusetts State Employment Office in New Bedford, opened Monday, August 15, for the coming harvest season. The Cranberry Trailer is located on the Mill Pond Diner parking lot on Route 28 in Wareham.

In making this announcement, Francis J. Murphy, supervising manager of the New Bedford office, stated that the opening date has been moved up in order to begin recruitment efforts early in the season.

In spite of the long drought, a bumper crop is expected because most of the growers have found ways to irrigate the bogs.

The demand for bog workers will be heavier than in previous years. Large numbers of picking machine operators, operator helpers, truck loaders and other auxiliary workers will be needed.

The harvest season will start late this month. For the present, the Trailer Office will operate from 7:30 A.M. to 2:30 P.M. Monday through Friday.

The Cranberry Trailer Office's telephone number is 295-3015. Growers may place orders for harvest workers by visiting the trailer or by phone. Job applicants are urged to register now at the Trailer Office.

During the week Kenneth E. Liberty, newly appointed Scout Executive, and Rudolph Blanchard, Council Commissioner, viewed Camp Rayford, complimenting Troop #31 for their fine camping program.

Assistant scoutmaster Donald Camara, waterfront director, began the program showing the prowess of the scouts in the water. First came an underwater race, a relay race, boat swamping, "White Whale" race, a three-man water rescue, the pajama race and boat rescue. The finale was the greased watermelon tussle. Staff members William Chamberlain, in charge of rifle safety; David Pare, handicrafts; Greenwood Hartley, 3rd, axe yard; Raymond Daggett, archery; Alton Ellis, pioneering; Peter Balzarini, personal fitness; and Robert Balzarini put on a demonstration on how "not to act" on a boating trip.

Each patrol performed a skit pertaining to some activity of camp life.

The Indian rituals were begun with a fire lighting dance done by Glenn Lawrence. The Buffalo dance included Lincoln Brown as the buffalo with Gifford Lawrence, Robert Vaughan, Bryan Sherman and Lloyd Vaughan as the hunters.

Greenwood Hartley, 3rd, presented the "Totin' Chip" badge awards to Paul Graham, Stephen Plaud, Bryan Sherman, Lincoln Brown, Lloyd and Robert Vaughan.

Committeeman Robert Doane announced that the Cuckoo Patrol was the winner of the New Hampshire trip which is sponsored annually by the Rochester Men's Brotherhood. The winning patrol accumulated the most number of points for attendance, advancement, camping and hiking. Patrol leader Hartley complimented his scouts for their efforts. Included in the Cuckoo Patrol are Carl Snow, Robert Hiller, Kenneth Daggett, Bryan Sherman, Roger Pinard, Bruce Deakin and Alan Aspden.

Scoutmaster Calvin Daggett praised the efforts of all the scouts and gave thanks to Committeeman Louis Cloutier for his assistance all week; to Joseph Pare who assisted with the nightly meals; Assistant Scoutmaster Harry A Brown, Jr., for Indian Lore; Committeeman Lloyd Gerrish for maintenance assistance; to D. L. Hartley for wood donated for the camp fires and to Peter Balzarini, Sr. for cooking equipment he donated.

Scoutmaster Daggett stated that Troop #31 is very fortunate to have such a fine area for a troop campsite through the generosity and interest in boys of the late Raynor M. Gifford.

Troop #31 is one of the many troops in the North District of the Cachalot Council and is sponsored by the Rochester Grange.

One of the most exciting happenings each year held for Father was the passing of the circus by his house in the middle of a summer's night on its way from New Bedford to the circus grounds in Mattapoisett. For at least two generations a small circus had put on an annual performance in Mattapoisett; Dr. Robbins had expressed his disgust in his diary in the 1830's. lection of wild animals, but by Father's boyhood in the 1860's and '70's other features had been added. The circus played several nights in New Bedford, then a one-night stand in Mattapoisett, and moved on next to Wareham.

From its earliest visitation to the village the circus had used the large vacant lot on the south side of Church Street between Mechanic and North Streets. In fact, many people in town can remember attending a performance of a small circus on this same lot in the early 1920's a performance containing, moreover, the added attraction of local talent; for Ray Sisson, who grew up in Mattapoisett, was traveling with the circus as one of the clowns. Unfortunately the performance followed a long period of rain which made the ground so sodden and soggy that the feet of the galloping horses stuck, and the beautiful ladies riding bareback were thrown in the mud.

But to get back to Father and 100 years ago. Obviously, the circus couldn't leave New Bedford until after the last night's show was over. So about two A.M. the long line of creaking wagons lumbered by the farm-house at the head of the Neck Road. Of course the date had been known way ahead of time, and for farmboys who never went anywhere or saw anything new, what anticipation! What excitement! What thrills!

The day that was to bring this sensation dragged like cold molasses; going to bed seemed an utter waste of effort. Father and his younger brother Ellis planned excitedly to stay awake till the spectacle arrived; but if they did fall asleep, the noise of the procession awoke them. In a flash they had on their pants, shirts, and jackets and raced out to behold the wondrous sight passing in the shadowy darkness.

First the elephants, preceded by two men carrying flares and led by the big bull elephant. Then the wagons--seemingly a half-mile of them--each with its hunched over driver half-

Through the night from the long line sounded the creaking of harness, the rumble of wheels, the hoarse curses of the drivers, and above all, the snarls and roars of the wild beasts lurching in their cages over the rough road. the lions? Which the hyenas? Which the man-eating grizzly bear? It was too much for human nature to bear; and long before the tail end of the line hove in sight, the boys raced alongside the wagons toward the herring weir to watch the procession rumble over the old wood bridge.

One time, however, there was more excitement than ever before. The elephants had just gone by the house, and the boys were standing fascinated by the beast-noises coming from each wagon, when abruptly the procession stopped. Instantly all was uproar. Each pair of horses ran into the wagon in front and reared and whinied. Drivers thrown from their seats cursed. Hoarse shouts came from up front. The wild animals raised their voices in the uproar.

The boys raced for the head of the line. There they found the tie-up. The big bull elephant, with the instinct of elephants from time immemorial, had placed one forefoot out onto the bridge to test whether it would support his weight. Instinct told him it would not. So he would not budge. In vain the circus crew swore, in vain they jabbed. Not a foot would he move. Nor would any of the others.

The upshot of the matter was that the circus crew tore a gap in the stone wall on the south side of the road (which must have pleased Uncle Ed Hammond) and proceeded to lead the elephants one by one down into the meadow and slid with them down the bank into the water --all this by lantern light. Then they waded across the river, leading the bull elephant followed single file by the others, and goaded them up the bank onto the road by the grist mill on the other side of the stream. The wagons had crossed the bridge as usual and the procession proceeded.

But to the two boys walking back home chattering their heads off--what a night! What a sight! What a tale to tell! And THEY HAD SEEN IT WITH THEIR OWN EYES!
